BROKEN HEARTED

Woman Who Wants Banker's $100,000 Tells of Former Husband's Visits.

HESITATES UNDER FIRE

Finds It Hard to Explain Who Bought Wine When Aged Mr. Levy Called.

Sadie A. Merrill, also called "Sadie Manning," was again on the cross-exmination grill of James W. Osborne, when the trial of her action for $100,000 Mamages against the septuagenarian banker, Lazarus Levy, of No. 111 Broadway, for the alleged breach of his promise to marry was resumed to-

Mr. Osborne went into the change of mame from Joe Flannigan to Joe Manming by the witness's husband, of Boston, when he bought a hotel at Exeter. N. H., and then her own voluntary and quite informal dropping of her new in 1902, and under which she attracted sented to the bride a wedding gift of Banker Levy away from Bessie Gibson, with whom she boarded, and who, she testified, was "Mr. Levy's sweetheart," "Why, there is no secret about that, Mr. Osborne," was a frequent ejaculation of the big-eyed witness when her eross-examiner's question took a tone of suspicion. 7 1 51 "No; and I'll say to you. Miss Merrill, that there will be no secret in this whole matter when you and I are through," rejoined Mr. Osborne. Everybody who could gain admission to the scene of the trial crowded in and they heard Mr. Osborne ask: "Now, I ask you, are Joe Flannigan and Joe Manning the same man?" A. Yes, the same gentleman.

Q. Was Joe Manning ever in your house at No. 208 West Fifty-fourth street? A. Yes; he came about two years ago, and was taken sick then. Q. That time he was sick you paid the doctor, didn't you? A. Yes, but he gave me the money.

Q. Now, didn't he work for you in that house? A. No, he did not. Q. You say you were housekeeper for Mrs. L. Gray when you first came to New York, and that she kept boarders bindy boarders. Didn't they have callers? A. Why, yes; I have said that. Q. Gentlemen callers? A. Sometimes.

Q. And they sometimes had refreshments? A. Sometimes. Q. Wine? A. Sometimes they had

The cross-examiner followed this line with questions intended to bring out that this was a sort of Raines Law hotel, and that the character of the witness was not just that of an in-

In that connection he introduced a letter which she identified as her own, addressed to another woman. It read, in part. as follows:
"Dear Mary. • • I am travelling to Hot Springs, and because my boy's clothing is marked 'Lee Manning.' must use my own name. I hope you make plenty of money. I have written to several of my gentlemen friends to call and see you.

"MRS. S. A. MANNING."

Doesn't Quite Know.

Mr. Osborne brought out that Mrs. Merrill first set up as a boarding-house keeper at No. 241 West Forty-third street in 1903, and was there when Mr. Levy first began to court her. Then she moved to No. 208 West Fifty-fourth street and gave up her boarders at Mr. Levy's insistance and let him pay the

"I had one servant, a colored maid named Mary Williams," said the wit-"Yes," enorted Mr. Osborne, "and when you wrote to Mary Williams 'I hope you'll make lots of money while I'm away. I shall write to all my gentlemen friends to call and see you,' you meant the men. who used to call at No. 242 West Forty-third street, didn't you? A. I didn't know: I suppose I meantwhy, they used to have card parties and like that. I-I dont know what I meant.

Q. "I hope you'll make lots of money while I am away." What did you mean by that? How was she going to make lots of money? A. Why, I might have had a vacant room or two and wanted tenants, and hoped she'd rent them. Q. Is that Mary?

A small figured, chocolate-colored woman stood up in the audience and revealed the sources of the cross-examiner's information.
A. Yes, that is Mary.

Had Wine There.

.. You have said that Mr. Levy, calling, sometimes bought some wine, any was sent out for the wine, wasn't she? A. Yes, I—that is, Mr. Levy—sent out for it.

Q. This che—from Mr. Levy for $78, payable to you, wasn't that to pay a vine bill? A. No, it was a present to to me. to me.

M. Osborne got the witness to tell where she bought wine. There were three places. She usually bought three bottles at a time and kept it in the cooler.

Q. How much did you charge for wine. A. Inever charged my guests for wine. Q. Did Mr. Levy ever see Joe Man-Q. Did Mr. Levy ever see Joe Manning in that flat of which he was paying the expenses? A. Sure he did.
Q. Did you introduce him? A. I did.
Q. As your ex-husband? A. I did.
He was married again then.
Q. Who was the second Mrs. Manning? A. Mary Bennett. She's an English woman, and they were married in Europe in 1993. He wrote a letter to tell me.
The cross-ramination mt the lady of The cross-examination got the lady of the shattered heart to admit that while she was away in the South three months and while at Hot Springs she got no latters from Levy.

Mixed the Dates. The witness acknowledged another letter addressed to the colored maid. "It was Aug. 23, 1906," she said, and it read in parti "I am tired of this life and I am going to sell out the business. I have a good chance to go to a swell hotel, where I can have everything I want." "What swell hotel was that?" asked "The Netherlands."

there?"

"ar. Levy," the witness replied.

Then her tormentor picked up her complaint in this action and read from it the allegation that on Aug. 6, 1906, Levy had quit her and refused to have anything more to do with her.

The confusion of the witness was relieved by Justice Fitzgerald, who ordered a recess.

Father Relents and Bridegroom Leaves Newark Jail With Child Bride.

When Charles Wheeler, of Utics, N. Y., was released from the Essex County (N. J.) jail at Newark, to-day he re joined his bride, whom he married yesterday in the presence of the Grand Jury, and the pair are to leave to-day for Utica, where they will live with Wheeler's mother. Wheeler is forty years old and his bride, who was Miss Madeline Patre, daughter of Nadol Patre, of No. 117 Dickerson street. Newark, is only sixteen. The bride, after having spent ten days in the House of the Good Shepherd, was called before the Grand Jury yesterday, and when she left the room she was name of Sadle Manning for that of Susie the wife of Wheeler, who had spent a A. > Wheeler met the girl last January and, despite the difference in ages, it was a case of love at first sight. The girl's father thought that Wheeler was too old for his daughter and objected to their being married. Wheeler and the girl subsequently went to where Miss Patre was cared for by Wheeler's mother. Patre swore out warrant charging Wheeler with abduction. As soon as Wheeler learned of this he came to Newark, bringing Miss Patre with him. He was held in

> All the persons concerned in the case were called before the Grand Jury yesterday. Wheeler expressed his desire to marry the girl and after much pleading, in which the girl joined, the father consented to the marriage.
